NOTION WEB CLIPPERS NEWS Notion is an amazing tool that helps you organize your research and work better. Having an extension for it can be useful, however, Notion Web Clipper for Google Chrome isn't the most powerful tool out there. Still, it can be a helpful addition to your arsenal if you work with large numbers of links and projects. Notion is an amazing tool that helps you organize your research and work better. Having an extension for it can be useful, however, Notion Web Clipper for Google Chrome isn't the most powerful tool out there. Still, it can be a helpful addition to your arsenal if you work with large numbers of links and projects. Is that all? Even though it's just a lightweight extension, Notion Web Clipper offers one extra function that can help you organize a project better. Namely, you can create new databases when you save a link, if you feel that your project doesn't already have a category where this specific link would fit. Unfortunately, you won't be able to rename the new database, unless you go to Notion's interface.

Notion Web Clipper Crack+ With License Key

Web Clipper is a simple extension that allows you to quickly clip links from the web. Installation: Install it from the Chrome web store (or... Description: Do you want to create your own lists of links and save them to Notion, but find yourself unable to do so because you haven't got a Notion account yet? As a web developer, I get a lot of links from various sources every day, and I always find myself lost and looking for the right place to save them. I want to make sure that I can keep my research process as efficient as possible, but with Notion as my only web-based research tool, I run into problems when I try to link to one of Notion's databases from the web. If your job involves keeping track of numerous projects and team members, than you might have already heard of Notion. The program is basically an all-in-one workspace that allows real-time collaboration and offers various organizing and document-editing tools. One of its functions is creating lists of links which you and your team members can use for future reference. With Notion Web Clipper for Google Chrome, you can add links to Notion's databases directly from your web browser. An uninterrupted research experience When done right, researching the web can be a rewarding and engaging experience, but one that you can easily get lost in. You may have often found yourself jumping from link to link until you forgot relevant pieces of information that you had found just minutes earlier. If only you had remembered to save your links. Well, Notion Web Clipper allows you to do this with just two clicks, without having to copy the link, leave the browser and paste it somewhere in the Notion application. It may not sound like much, but this can actually help your research seem less fragmented. Once you get used to this simple process, your browsing experience might run a lot smoother. Is that all? Even though it's just a lightweight extension, Notion Web Clipper offers one extra function that can help you organize a project better. Namely, you can create new databases when you save a link, if you feel that your project doesn't already have a category where this specific link would fit
